

From: HRHelp-John Perkins [mailto:hrhelp@cox.net]

Subject: HR Alert: Businesses Struggle to Find Drug-Free Workers

FYI. From Quest Diagnostics.

Businesses Struggle to Find Drug-Free Workers

Data from the Quest Diagnostics Drug Testing Index™ was cited saying that for the second consecutive year, the percentage of American workers [General U.S. workforce] who tested positive for illicit drugs increased — from 4.3 percent in 2013 to 4.7 percent in 2014. And 2013 was the first year in a decade to show an increase in positivity rates.

To read more, go to: <http://blog.employersolutions.com/businesses-struggle-to-find-drug-free-workers/http://blog.employersolutions.com/businesses-struggle-to-find-drug-free-workers/>

Does Workplace Drug Testing Work?

Drug Users Try to Avoid Drug Testing

Research demonstrates that workplace drug testing helps to deter employees from using drugs on the job and candidates from applying for jobs at companies that drug test.

To read more, go to: <http://blog.employersolutions.com/does-workplace-drug-testing-work/>